MAKING ROOM:
PLANNING FOR THOSE WHO ARE HERE & THOSE ON THEIR WAY TO THE CONNECTICUT RIVER VALLEY

A Bi-State Discussion on Climate Migration

Feb 23rd 2:30pm-4pm – Overview of the Situation (Virtual)
March TBD – World Café Discussions (details coming soon)
Apr 20th 2:30pm-4pm – Programs, Funding and Case Studies (Virtual)
May 16-17th – Local Solutions Conference (In-person)

Find out More and Register : https://www.crjc.org/makingroom/

The Connecticut River Joint Commissions invites you to participate in a discussion about planning for climate migration. This series is planned for the bi-state Connecticut River Valley (CRV) region in NH and VT.

There's good reason to believe the CRV will be increasingly attractive to those who want to move away from coastal flooding and storms, wildfires and smoke, and the scarcity of fresh

These discussions will examine the local planning and decision-making necessary to encourage needed homes and direct them to places best suited to protect the CRV's resources and resilience for generations to come. This event will also grapple with how to plan for accommodating both new and current residents, when we are already struggling with a housing crisis.

Who should attend? This series is free and open to the public, except for the Local Solutions Conference that requires payment upon registration. CRJC Commissioners and local representatives; municipal planning commissions, select boards, housing commissions, conservation commissions; regional and state planners; engaged community members.

This program is a collaboration of Connecticut River Joint Commissions with Antioch University New England, NOAA, the Upper Valley Adaptation Workgroup, and the City of Keene.